NO MORE SEEDS.

Congressman George A. Neeley by this time no doubt believes in the efficiency of newspaper advertising. He had inserted a notice in the papers of this community that he had for free distribution a quantity of seeds of various kinds, and the demands for the same have been so great that the requests outnumbered the supply about three to one, and he has asked us to insert a notice that the supply is now exhausted, and that for the present at least he will be unable to fill further orders.

"Seeing is Believing"

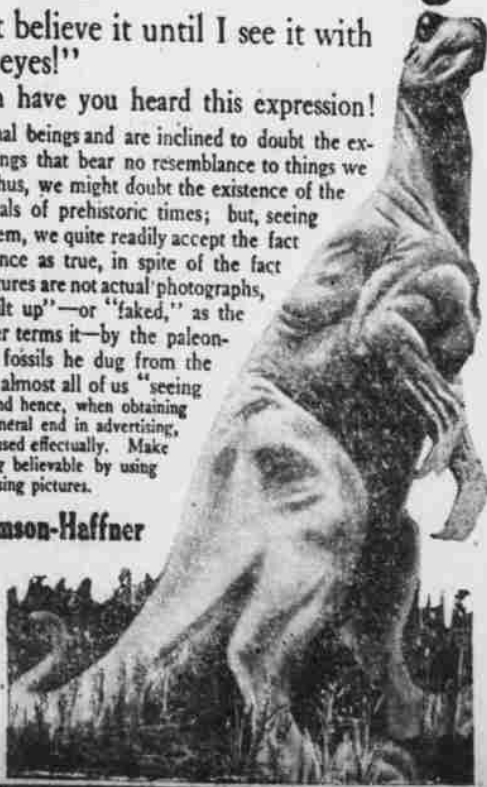

"I won't believe it until I see it with my own eyes!"

How often have you heard this expression!

We are rational beings and are inclined to doubt the existence of things that bear no resemblance to things we have seen. Thus, we might doubt the existence of the colossal animals of prehistoric times; but, seeing pictures of them, we quite readily accept the fact of their existence as true, in spite of the fact that these pictures are not actual photographs, but were "built up"—or "faked," as the photo-engraver terms it—by the paleontologist from fossils he dug from the earth. With almost all of us "seeing is believing," and hence, when obtaining belief is the general end in advertising, pictures can be used effectively. Make your advertising believable by using effective advertising pictures.
